CAMP TO BE FORMED.

MANCHESTER AND SWANSBORD VETERANS TO ORGANIZE.

The Grays Elect Officers and Fill Vacancies and Have a Pleasant

Steps are being taken to organize a Confederate camp of veterans in Manchester. There are many gallant sofdiers in this city and Swansboro' who n the days of 1861-'65 struggled against he enemy on many a hard-fought battlefield, and they wish to band themselves ogether, as have their comrades in Richand and other portions of the State. With this object in view the ex-Confede rate soldiers of this city and Swansboro' eill meet Friday night in Gibbs's Opera-House, and a large attendance is expect-

Several years ago, when the remains of ex-President Jefferson Davis were reinterred in Richmond, a number of ex-Confederates organized a camp for the purpose of attending the ceremonies, but since that time there has not been much attention paid to the organization, and consequently no interest was afterwards The intention of the meeting Friday night is to organize a permanent camp, and a number of veterans from Richmond are expected to be present. BRIEF BITS OF NEWS.

Postmaster D. L. Toney says that the business in the post-office is very large and everything is working nicely. The Manchester office has been made an international money-order office, and money can be sent to all parts of the world. Heretofore money could only be sent to different parts of the United States, and a number of residents of this city and Chesterfield who transact business with people in foreign countries were compelled to go to Richmond to receive or send money-orders. Mr. Toney is working hard for a free-delivery system, and it is the wish of the citizens that his efforts will be crowned with success.

An Accident to Engineer Jones.

Mr. D. S. R. Jones, of Crewe, Va., an engineer on the Norfolk and Western raijroad, met with quite a painful accident yesterday, which will probably result in the loss of an eye. He was in the cab of his engine at Crewe, when a defective lubricator exploded and shot a stream of boiling water in Mr. Jones's face, scalding him in a frightful manner. Medical attention was at once given him, and he was later brought to Richmond to be treated by Dr. White, Mr. Jones is a brother of Magistrate F. B. Those whose efforts were especially commendable in the first part of the programme were the Norwegian Mandolin Club, Miss Sallie Bright, recitations, Mr. G. W. B. Crawford, comic songs; Mr. D. A. A GREAT PICTURE.

Popiel's Musterpiece, "After the Storm.

A number of gentlemen, including the members of the Senate, were yesterday afternoon afforded a private view of Popiel's great picture, "After the Storm," which has just been put in position at A. Saks & Co.'s, and which the general public will be invited to view as soon as the details of draping the alcove are perfected. The production is a grand triumph fected. The production is a grand triumph of the pairiter's brush in all the essentials of art. The first object of any art creation ought to be to tell a story, and this object, "After the Storm' attains to the fullest. Its story is that of a Polish peasant couple, who, after toiling a whole season to raise a crop of wheat, awaks one morning to find that the elements have swept away their living for the next year. The capruss is about 12x14 feet. In the foreground, and in dumb despair, the couple, the woman with clasped hands, and the man, with the stolidness of one dazed, are contemplating the devastation. On the faces of both is stamped unutterable woe. The wheat lies prone, a tangled, twisted mass, in a field elevated slightly above the road, in which the two figures are posed, and this road, in its ruts, its pools of water, and its exposed stones, shows the cruel force of the rain that had fallen and washed it. In the middle distance are three other figures, whose gaze is bent upon the peasant and his wife, and who are approaching the immediate scene of desolation, and then stretches a background and perspective of wonderful depth and expanse. The storm clouds have rolled back, but have not disappeared. Their blackness has of the painter's brush in all the essentials storm clouds have rolled back, but have not disappeared. Their blackness has changed into a dull whitish gray, and one not disappeared. Their blackness has changed into a dull whitish gray, and one almost feels the dampness in the suggestion of a mist that nervades the atmosphere. Faithfulness characterizes every feature of the composition, all minutiae being worked out with the greatest delicacy. The drapery of the figures and its texture are wonderfully realistic. The pervasive tone of the picture is sombre, but here and there warmth is most skilifully and most naturally imparted, as in the trimmings of the costumes and the efflorescing weeds that peep, it would seem mockingly, out from the maze of destroyed wheat. Thaddeus Suleina Poptel lived, breathed, and had his being in Poland, and his "After the Storm" is the child of a heart and mind in sympathy with the peasantry of that country. It is truly a masterpiece, a creation of genius that is an art education. It is a picture a child can read the story of, and that is a crucial test of art. It is gratifying to know that all the school children, as well as the grown people, will be invited to see the canvas. The artist has resorted to no effects to catch the tancy for the moment. He has painted to make a lasting impression; painted to touch the deepest feelings, and has succeeded. If we must class him in a school, it is that of Millet, as illustrated in "The Angelus." He gets similar grand effects from similar material—a few figures, the fields, the aimosphere, and the pathos of nature. The original cost of the painting was $16,000.

The corresponding secretary, Miss Poindexter, being absent, her reports from the following unions—East-End. West-End. Central, Richmond Y's, Church-Hill Y. Centralia, Highland Springs, West-Point, Golden Rule Y. Sunbeam Y, Jobson Y—were read by the recording secretary. All these organizations were reported to be in a flourishing condition.

Noontide prayer was offered by Mrs. William H. Pleasants.

The convention adjourned at 12 o'cleck for luncheon, and during the repast the delegates were treated to a phonographic concert. The Richmond Y's served the decantes with coffee and chocolate and other refreshments.

The afternoon session opened with prayer by Mrs. M. Lee.

A TEMPERANCE SERMON. A TEMPERANCE SERMON.
A committee was appointed to wait on all ministerial bodies and request them to have temperance sermons preached out the Sabbath preceding Christmas.

WOMAN'S BIBLE CONDEMNED.

Mrs. Whitehead offered the following.

Mrs. Whitehead offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:
Resolved, That we deplore the issuing by Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lillie Deveraux Blake, and others of what is known as the Woman's Bible: that we accept the place given us in God's Book with Joy; that we believe the attempt to mar the perfectness of the Holy Scriptures for personal reasons or self-aggrandizement is a sin. Therefore, that for this movement we have no sympathy—only sincere and sorrowful condemnation.

Miss C. Dyer gave an illustrated health talk.

Mrs. M. B. Lee, on behalf of the East-End Woman's Christian Temperance Urlon, invited the district to convene with them next March.

Mrs. William H. Pleasants, superintendent of literature for the district, had something of interest to say in her line.

The question-box was left over till the next convention, and the body adjourned. Mrs. Whitehead offered the following esolution, which was unanimously adopt

For the last two or three ylears he had held the responsible position of paymaster of the southern division of the Mexican National Railway, in which his fine business capacity and close attention to business had won for him the confidence and esteem of his employers. Ryland, late Treasurer of King William county, discharging from liability the bondsmen of Mr. Ryland, and rendering judgment for the amount claimed by the State-5.91.51-against the former Treasurer alone. This result was predicted in the Dispatch of Tussday, as it was clear that the bond of Mr. Ryland was not technically a legal instrument. Several of the sureties had given a power of attorney to another surety to sign their names within a certain amount, and no limitation was made by the signer. This power-of-attorney also failed to have a scal upon it, which is required by law.

The case was called to have a scal upon it, which is required by law. The case was called in the City Circuit Court on Tuesday, and counsel for the defendants submitted several pleas, upon some of which issue was joined.
